

Biography

Dr Bernadette Abela-Ridder works at World Health Organization (WHO) leading the work on diseases associated with a human animal interface at the Department for the Control of Neglected Tropical Diseases (NTDs). Previously she worked WHO Department of Food Safety and Zoonoses, US Food and Drug Administration on antimicrobial resistance, for l'Institut de recherche pour le développement (IRD) in Cameroon on emergence of simian immunodeficiency viruses from non-human primates including bushmeat, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the U.N. on veterinary public health, and in clinical veterinary practice.